As recorded by the UJC case processing system, Fall 2016 covers complaints filed between June 1, 2016 and December 31, 2016. Spring 2017 covers complaints filed between January 1, 2017 and May 31, 2017. These statistics were publicly released on February 14, 2018 by a unanimous vote of the Voting Members of the Judiciary Committee, pursuant to Article III, §2.4.c. of the UJC Bylaws. Commentary on these statistics reflects only the views of the 2017-2018 Voting Members, and is subject to alternative interpretation by subsequent Committees.

Summary

Demographic Information

Demographic information reported is collected via self-report for Accused, Complainant, and UJC committee members and support officers using the UJC Online System. The fields available for recording identification of ethnicities are no longer in line with the University of Virginia's 2010-2011 updated collection procedures for demographic information for all students. In particular, the UJC system does not currently allow respondents to identify with multiple ethnicities, and does not have a Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander category. Other terms used to identify ethnic groups also differ in wording from UVA's reporting.

For these reasons, it is not currently possible to directly compare UJC demographic statistics to those of the University as a whole. Future updates to the UJC's Online System will bring the UJC demographic information collection in line with UVA policies.

Sanction Statistics

In cases where the accused is found or pleads guilty, the trial panel may assign no sanction, one sanction, or multiple sanctions.

Sanctions are determined on a case-by-case basis, and trial panels take aggravating or mitigating factors into account. For this reason, it is not possible to compare the sanctions resulting from separate cases involving the same Standards violations – each student's situation is different, and trial panels work to craft sanctions that will best address his or her individual circumstances.

Community service sanctions are typically assigned to one or more of four organizations: Facilities Management (Landscaping Division), Gordie Center, Parking and Transportation, or Recycling. In some cases, discretion is given to the sanctioned student to pick suitable service organizations. In these cases, the choice of service organization is reviewed by the Vice-Chair for Sanctions to ensure that it fulfills the goals of the Trial Panel issuing the community service sanction.

Note on Data from Internal System

The data in this report was generated by the UJC's internal case management system. This system does not draw a distinction between cases with multiple accused students and does not account for trials that were flagged for issues (i.e. student withdrawal), postponed indefinitely, or dropped. Moreover, the system counts individual accused students separately, despite the fact that they may share the same case. Additionally, accused students are counted only once, even if they have multiple cases within the UJC. Certain apparent discrepancies in the following data may be explained by the aforementioned limitations of the internal system.

Disclaimer: All data and statistics relating to student identity and affiliation are based solely on self-reported data. As such, the actual demographic distributions may systematically differ from those contained within this report.

⁹ A sanction assigned “in abeyance” is noted in a student’s UJC record, which is referenced if that student is subsequently found guilty of another violation of the Standards of Conduct. Sanctions in abeyance represent a trial panel’s strong recommendation that the next trial panel impose the abeyance sanction for a subsequent violation. Sanctions in abeyance are typically assigned conditionally on the nature of subsequent violations; for instance, a suspension in abeyance for subsequent violations of Standard 1 would not apply to a student found guilty of a Standard 6 violation in future UJC proceedings.
